

Secretary Ryan had suggested that the President might wish to hear the views of the members of the staff on the subject.

During Secretary Ryan's speech he stated that the Army Force could carry out the program within the budget. The difficulty was the force level in the Army. The Air Force would be back in line if it could be a little more.

General Summary was invited to offer his views on the subject of Secretary Ryan's speech to explain what the Army would be doing.

Secretary Ryan's speech had been generally well received with respect to the Navy.

However, when the President called in the members of the Army, Secretary Ryan's speech was well received. He read a short statement (copy of which was distributed) and then went out with great interest in the subject. He said that he was very much in sympathy with a program of the kind which was proposed. He said that he regarded his own part of the program as being particularly important. He said he had a respect for the Navy's independence. He said that he would be very glad to see the Navy's program. He said that he would like to see the Navy's program. He said that he would like to see the Navy's program. He said that he would like to see the Navy's program.

Secretary Ryan's speech was a good one. He had the advantage of being in the line of vision when he was speaking. He said that he was very much in sympathy with a program of the kind which was proposed. He said that he regarded his own part of the program as being particularly important. He said that he had a respect for the Navy's independence. He said that he would be very glad to see the Navy's program. He said that he would like to see the Navy's program. He said that he would like to see the Navy's program.

The President then turned the floor over to Secretary Ryan, and said that with regard to Secretary Ryan's speech he was very much in sympathy with a program of the kind which was proposed. He said that he regarded his own part of the program as being particularly important. He said that he had a respect for the Navy's independence. He said that he would be very glad to see the Navy's program. He said that he would like to see the Navy's program. He said that he would like to see the Navy's program.

Mr. Ryan then said that he had frequently spoken to the President and was very much in sympathy with a program of the kind which was proposed. He said that he regarded his own part of the program as being particularly important. He said that he had a respect for the Navy's independence. He said that he would be very glad to see the Navy's program. He said that he would like to see the Navy's program. He said that he would like to see the Navy's program.

REPRODUCED AT THE DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LIBRARY

SECRET

Before meeting with the Judge, the President made comments on this commission which were said to be highly favorable. The Judge then proceeded to his presentation of the report (copy of new figures still in brackets).

Synopsis of the report of the Judge with respect to the commission's conclusions on the subject of the budget for the fiscal year. The President observed that the Judge's report was a very good one and that he had no objection to its publication. He said that he had no objection to its publication in a cheerful and confident manner.

The President also said that he should be pleased to receive the Defense Department for the fiscal year. He said that he was pleased to receive the policies of the new Administration. He said that he knew what the responsibility was for their country and he was confident that they would discharge their duty with the same vigor and energy as in the past. He said that he and his staff were of the opinion that the report of the commission was a very good one and that he had no objection to its publication. He did not believe, however, that the commission's report was a very good one in the sense that it was a very good one in the sense of the word. He said that he was confident that the report of the commission was a very good one and that he had no objection to its publication. He said that he was confident that the report of the commission was a very good one and that he had no objection to its publication.

The National Security Council

- a. Report prepared by the Secretary of Defense, dated 10/10/54, and the Chief of Staff, dated 10/10/54, regarding the proposed increase in the number of personnel in the Department of Defense for the fiscal year 1955.
- b. Report prepared by the Secretary of Defense, dated 10/10/54, and the Chief of Staff, dated 10/10/54, regarding the proposed increase in the number of personnel in the Department of Defense for the fiscal year 1955.
- c. Report prepared by the Secretary of Defense, dated 10/10/54, and the Chief of Staff, dated 10/10/54, regarding the proposed increase in the number of personnel in the Department of Defense for the fiscal year 1955.
- d. Report prepared by the Secretary of Defense, dated 10/10/54, and the Chief of Staff, dated 10/10/54, regarding the proposed increase in the number of personnel in the Department of Defense for the fiscal year 1955.

